Your Personal Data – Under 18 Savings Customers

If you are going to open an account with us, then we will ask for some information about you. This includes information like your name, how old you are, where you live, and a few other important bits that we need to open your account, and to keep it going. The proper name for this information is “personal data”.

In the United Kingdom (UK), there are some rules for us about how we protect your information. All together these rules are called the UK General Data Protection Regulations or UK GDPR for short. Below is a quick summary of what these rules mean for you and your information.

We are responsible for your data. This means:

- ✓ We only collect data that is necessary
- ✓ We store it safely and securely
- ✓ We do not hold it for longer than is necessary

While we have your data, we make sure that we look after it properly.

Most of the time we keep your information within the UK, but if we ever have to share it with anyone else, we will make sure they also look after your information just as carefully as we do.

You can ask us certain things about your personal information:

- What we are using it for
- If it is wrong or has information missing, for us to fix it
- To stop using it
- To delete it
- To see the information that we have about you
- To ask us to give it to another company (such as another building society or bank)

The UK GDPR says we can only use your information when we have a fair reason. Some of the reasons it says are when:

- We need to use that information so that you can use your account
- The law says we have to
- We feel it may be useful to you
- You say that we can

We will only send you letters about your account when it's important.
